Do not rely upon the analyzer to determine the level of intoxication or whether you are legally able to drive or operate equipment. Because of the numerous factors that determine an individual's blood alcohol content, this analyzer is designed to be used as a reference measure only to aid in indicating the level of alcohol present in the blood. Under no circumstances should the user rely on the results of the readings of the detector to determine intoxication levels which may result in decisions to operate vehicles or equipment of any kind or participate in any type of dangerous activity. The analyzer makes no reference whatsoever to blood alcohol content or other such measures of intoxication promulgated by government, medical or other agencies or bodies. The supplier, manufacturer, dealer, wholesaler, distributor or any of their respective affiliates do not warrant the accuracy of the product and will not be held legally responsible for the consequences of any decision, based on the use of the product, to operate any motorized vehicle or other equipment or to participate in any dangerous activity; including any claims for special, indirect or consequential damages
